

Being a leader means being confident and motivated to give things a go. It means that I see myself as a person who can positively influence others, and that I can have a say in this learning community and the wider world. I interact respectfully with a wide range of people and am a role model of our FERN values.

I show integrity and I follow through on actions I have agreed to take. I can deal with any issues that arise positively and know when to take action. I have a can-do attitude and strive to be the best I can.

I am responsible for my actions; I make choices that mean that I can make the most of the opportunities that are given. I have a positive group of friends who nurture me and help me to feel confident about myself.

As a life long learner I have a passion for learning. I look for ways to extend my learning and challenge myself. I find creative solutions to problems and reflect on my ideas. I am curious about the world I live in and ask questions that help to deepen my understanding.

I strive to learn in all subjects; I really think hard about what I'm learning and why I'm learning it. I try to connect my learning with the world outside school. I'm willing to take risks with my learning and learn from my mistakes. I am open to new ideas and I see new experiences as opportunities to learn.

I can set goals and take actions to achieve them. I think about my learning and take charge of my own progress. I make sure that I am focussed on my goals and am responsible for achieving them.

Being a communicator means I am able to work effectively with a range of different people with a positive attitude. I can accept a role in a group and encourage others with theirs. As a good communicator I share my ideas willingly and confidently. I also listen respectfully with an open mind; realising that everyone's ideas are helpful.

I can adapt and change my thinking when I work with a group. Being able to relate well to others means that I am caring, kind and I accept that we are all different. I include others and understand how they are feeling. Working with others supports me in my learning by extending my own ideas.

As a contributor I feel I belong to the school community and my voice is heard. I am open-minded and able to share my opinions to make a difference to my world. I care about the impact that we have on our environment and I am willing to take action to create positive change.

I am actively involved in my school and the wider community. I enjoy being involved in groups and teams- my support makes the team stronger.

I care for the school environment and take responsibility for my actions in it. I enjoy being a part of a school that cares about the environment and I always contribute to the best of my ability.
